

June 2020

Dear Friends of the Harry Sutherland Library,

A big Thank you! to all who contacted me that you enjoyed the new format of the May newsletter. In that vein: with many of you staying home I have been searching for ways to access philatelic information from your computer. The best source for information is one you may be aware (and even a member) of:

 www.bnaps.org

British North America Philatelic Society

The Society for Canadian Philately

Home   BNAPEX ▾   Society ▾   Study/Regional Groups ▾   Publications & Online Library ▾

BNAPS has many study groups and regional groups and many of them have or did have newsletters. Much of this material is available online.

Many of the newsletters are accessible up to 5 years ago while a few have even the current issue listed. Try out the wide variety of sources here for hours of philatelic fun.

Another great thing to do is to look for any journal that is of interest to you. Finding their website will often lead you to pdf versions of back issues. For example, try out the Canadian Aerophilatelist at <http://aerophilately.ca/pdfbacktest.html>. You can also join from this page.

And before you leave any website scroll down because many of them have links to related web pages, you might find even more free and interesting materials there.

Aerophilatelic Links

Here are just a few:

Aerophilatelic Societies.

The American Air Mail Society

The AAMS was founded in 1923, a society in the world.

Irish Airmail Society

The Irish Airmail Society was founded in 1923, a society in the world. It is concerned with airmails shown by several philatelic societies in Great Britain, Switzerland, Canada and the United States.

Airpost Journal
Archives

This is just one example from the American Air Mail Society shown above. If you scroll down slightly you get their archive of journals. Again the current 5 years are not available unless you are a member. Why not join both societies if you are interested in airmail.

Always check out the links on any philatelic page you visit, you will find lots of treasures and even more hours of enjoyment.

Here are a few more you might try:

American Philatelic Society

<https://stamps.org>

The APS also has links to their many affiliates: Select the Community button in the top bar by hovering your mouse over the word and then Affiliates from the drop down menu. There are dozens of links to philatelic study groups.

United Nations Philatelists Inc. at: <http://unpi.com/>. Just click on Journals + and there is a complete archive of previous issues.

Stamp Insider is only available online at: <http://stampinsider.org/>.

Stamp collectors are a very generous bunch, sharing their knowledge and the information that they have found. Start anywhere, a stamp club, a magazine you know about, a study group or a topic that is of interest to you. Find that online and then follow any labyrinthine path to many other interesting locations and topics. There is lots to find in English and in other languages (try, for example, the French journal Philabec at: <http://www.philabec.com/index.php?c=2> or Congolatres in several languages at <http://www.philafrica.be/CONGOLATRES/bulletins.htm>).

The library will continue to be open Monday to Thursday for research requests by phone or email although there may be delays in answering.

Keep well and safe,

Willow
